SCOTT DIXON
Head PGA Professional

Scott Dixon turned pro in 1992 as Trainee professional with Simon Boulden at Llandudno Golf Club in North Wales and, after spending 4 fantastic years in Llandudno Scott moved to Dalmahoys Hotel and Country Club in 1996 as Assistant Professional to Brian Anderson.

Scott's current role as Head Professional allows him to work with a huge array of golfers from complete beginners to elite players. Scott has been lucky to have worked and trained with many top coaches and trainers from all over the world who have helped him shape not only his style of coaching but his own game - Kendal McWade, Karl Morris, Jamie Edwards, Eileen Auld and Tony Robbins are to name a few.

Scott believes in order to improve your golf you have to develop all the skills the game requires. These skills include many different golf shots as well as the correct mental approach. There is no doubt to him that the most fun and effective way to do this is through playing games and challenging yourself to achieve certain tasks.

"Golf is not a game of swings but a game of shots, and we must get away from the quick fix, found it, lost it culture and back to one of learning and discovery."
